Option 1: If I had known... Trauma Informed Ethics & Boundaries

This is a continuation of the version Mark and Peter have been offering since Fall 2012. Research suggests that the incidence of abuse and neglect is higher among those with disabilities than the general population. For some people receiving support there is evidence of post-traumatic stress (PTS). For too many others there is the cumulative effect of experiencing a lack of power and control in their support relationships. For each of us in support roles, would we make different decisions about our support interactions and recommendations if we more actively considered her/his point of view? Would you have made different decisions if you had known ...?

Option 2: Relationship Based Ethics & Boundaries

Ethical issues, dilemmas and decisions have personal and interactive components to them. We are affected and influenced by other people and situations. Sometimes, we make decisions on matters that have a direct impact on the lives of people with disabilities who receive support without thinking or even being aware of those effects and influences. During this session we want to focus on some of the personal factors that might distract us from doing what is right for the person who receives support. We would like to concentrate on how mindfulness can help us to meet our ethical responsibilities.

Mark Sweet, Ph.D. is Trainer & Consultant with Disability Rights Wisconsin (DRW), a federally funded nonprofit designated to protect and advocate the rights of children and adults with disabilities. In this role, Mark works with preschool and school programs, supported work and supported living organizations, consumer and parent groups, long term care programs and others. He also works on a federally funded anti-violence grant related to individuals with disabilities. The emphasis of his work is to better understand the point of view of those who receive support.

Peter Leidy has been learning from people with disabilities since 1983. For 20 years he worked for Options in Community Living, a supported living agency in Madison, Wisconsin. His roles included direct support, support coordination, staff recruitment, supporting direct service staff, community building and administrative responsibilities. Peter develops training materials and conducts trainings on a wide variety of topics. He also consults with individuals, families, organizations, counties, and states in areas such as supported living, self-determination, organizational development, building community relationships, and supporting and valuing staff.
