

WHAT WILL BE YOUR ETHICAL LEGACY?

2012 Ethics & Boundaries

Training & Conversation

with Mark Sweet, PhD and
Peter Leidy

For every family member and paid worker, as well as those who have indirect roles in the lives of elders, children and adults with developmental and other disabilities, there are many moments of decision that effect the future of a person receiving support.

- When there are many stakeholders, who influences your decisions?
- When there is less money, what compromises do you make?
- When time is limited, how do you gather the information needed to make ethical decisions?
- When a person does not have ease of communication, how do you represent her/his point of view?
- When the ethical question is, what's the right thing to do, from whose point of view do you make your decisions?
- What is your ethical legacy in relation to each person you support?

Also to be considered:

- What are the responsibilities and limitations of support relationships?
- When are the decisions we make for her own good and in his best interests detrimental?

We have created these sessions as opportunities for conversation about both protecting people's safety and advocating for meaningful community participation that includes a variety of relationships.

Mark Sweet, Ph.D. is Trainer & Consultant with Disability Rights Wisconsin (DRW), a federally funded nonprofit designated to protect and advocate the rights of children and adults with disabilities. In this role, Mark works with preschool and school programs, supported work and supported living organizations, consumer and parent groups, long term care programs and others. He also works on a federally funded anti-violence grant related to individuals with disabilities. The emphasis of his work is to better understand the point of view of those who receive support.

Peter Leidy has been learning from people with disabilities since 1983. For 20 years he worked for Options in Community Living, a supported living agency in Madison, Wisconsin. His roles included direct support, support coordination, staff recruitment, supporting direct service staff, community building and administrative responsibilities. Peter develops training materials and conducts trainings on a wide variety of topics. He also consults with individuals, families, organizations, counties, and states in areas such as supported living, self-determination, organizational development, building community relationships, and supporting and valuing staff.
